English is the world's most widely used language. It is useful to distinguish three primary categories of use as native language, as a second language and as a foreign language. English is spoken as a native language by nearly three hundred million people in the United States, Britain, Ireland, Australia, New Zealand, Canada.

[4]

The Caribbean and South Africa, without mentioning smaller countries or smaller pockets of native English speakers. In several of the countries, English is not the sole language. The Quebec province of Canada is French speaking. Much of South Africa is African speaking and for many Irish Quebec and Africans speaking English will so be a second language, that is language necessary for certain official, social, commercial or educational activities within their own country. The second language function is more noteworthy, now-ever is a long list of countries where only small proportion of the people have English as their native language. India, Pakistan, Nigeria, Kenya and many other commonwealth countries and former British territories. Thus half a century after independence India maintained English as the medium of instruction for approximately half of its total higher education.

Questions:

- (i) What are the three primary categories of the use of English.
- (ii) How many people speak English as a native language?
- (iii) What is meant by the second language?
- (iv) Which are the countries that use English as the second language?
- (v) In which countries English is a native language?
